

Families First Quality Award

For Schools

FAMILIES FIRST QUALITY AWARD

All schools know that valuing parents and providing information to families is a key part of their work. These schools work effectively with parents / carers and a range of partners to enhance children's learning and developmental opportunities.

The Families First Quality Assurance Scheme is an opportunity for schools to demonstrate quality of work to families and the relevant school inspectorate (Ofsted for England / Estyn for Wales). Beyond this, the scheme provides an effective quality improvement tool that is designed to complement the relevant Inspection Frameworks.

It is our experience that the values underpinning the Families First Quality Standards are evidence of effective leadership and management within an organisation. These standards provide a consistent national benchmark for quality and form part of a suite of standards that also cover Sure Start Children's Centres, and Family Information Services.

They have been designed help schools demonstrate how they keep families at the heart of their practice, support children throughout their education and work partners including local authority Families Information Services to help families access a range of information, advice and support.

The Families First Standards give schools a great opportunity for schools improve their practice and demonstrate to the Ofsted¹ / Estyn inspectorate and families their commitment to valuing parents in the way the school is led and managed.

ABOUT THE FAMILIES FIRST QUALITY AWARD

The Families First Quality Award (FFQA) is a competence-based framework focussing on the working practices of a whole organisation. Assessments against the Families First standards are carried out by qualified Families First Assessors who will work with schools to identify suitable examples of evidence that demonstrate competence against the individual elements of the standards.

The standards have been designed so that specific requirements from schools or groups of schools can easily be included into the existing Families First framework. Assessment of schools via the Families First Quality Award will help them work effectively with families and a range of partners to deliver effective teaching and learning to pupils.

The aim is to ensure that, while an organisation reaps the rewards of the Families First Standards journey, they never lose sight of the needs and well-being of families and recognise the significant contribution parents and carers make to children's learning and in the life of school.

The Families First Standards enable schools to consider their work with families through a quality improvement process, supported by a qualified Families First Assessor.

These Standards will also help the school to work with their local authority and other organisations to provide information, advice and assistance to families with the overall aim of improving outcomes and attainment for its pupils.

WHAT IS INFORMATION, ADVICE AND ASSISTANCE?

Providing information, advice and assistance (IAA) covers a range of activities that equip parents, prospective parents and family members with what they need to make informed choices about the care, health, education and recreation of their children, including those with specific requirements.²

IAA can be defined as:

- information – accurate, up-to-date and objective information about childcare, health, recreation and learning opportunities, progression routes, choices, funding and where to find help and advice and how to access this
- advice – activities that help parents / carers, prospective parents and family members to gather, understand and interpret information and apply it to their own situation
- assistance – provision of an impartial signposting, brokerage and referral service to specialist support to help parents / carers, prospective parents and family members to meet their information needs and make progress

² Each LA has a duty to provide IAA to families (Duty 12 of the Childcare Act 2006).

Families First Quality Award for Schools

The Families First Quality Award for Schools is suitable for primary and secondary schools (academies, free schools, maintained and independent), special schools and pupil referral units. All schools with the Families First Quality Award have demonstrated that they value families in their direct work with parents, children and young people, and with relevant partners.

These schools foster positive relationships with families and put their needs at the heart of everything they do. They encourage parental involvement in the life of the school, and help families support their children's learning, development and progression.

Local Authority Families Information Services (FIS) in England and Wales are in a unique position to help schools and contribute to meeting shared objectives. A Family Information Service is a key Local Authority service providing information, advice and assistance to families usually via a helpline and online service directory (website).

For the purposes of this document the acronym 'FIS' will be used to refer to Family Information Services in England and Wales.

WHY IS GOOD QUALITY IAA IMPORTANT?

Schools are in an excellent position to provide face-to-face IAA to families in the area that they serve. Good quality IAA supports parents, prospective parents and family members to make informed decisions about their child's education and other services that they may want or need to access. By providing IAA, schools support parents and help their children to achieve the following outcomes: to be healthy; stay safe; enjoy and achieve; make a positive contribution and achieve economic wellbeing.

HOW DO SCHOOLS PROVIDE IAA?

In delivering their service to families, schools provide IAA as an embedded part of their practice. For example, schools provide families information and advice about the school, teaching and learning and the curriculum. School staff also know how to refer families to other local information and support services. Finally, schools provide IAA to pupils and their families to prepare a child or young person for key transitions in their life and ultimately for adulthood.

WHAT IS A FAMILIES INFORMATION SERVICE APPROACH?

Local authorities in England and Wales can make better use of the existing resources maintained and used by their FIS, via a number of hubs or delivery channels. The benefits to schools and other partners is that most local authorities have developed a wealth of knowledge about services relevant for families with children from birth to 19 years. This is usually via the FIS and / or Integrated Youth Support Service. Often the FIS will provide an Internet based Family Service Directory, which schools and other partners can utilise as a source of information, advice and assistance to children and families.

Schools contribute to a Families Information Service Approach by providing high quality information to families, and when referring families to other sources of advice, support and information and by working with partners. For example, schools can work closely together with other schools in their community, local employers, and with Early Years Foundation Stage providers in a local area in order to improve outcomes and help families access their free early education entitlement either directly (if the school provides this service) or from another local provider.

Schools can develop strong links with their local authority FIS, and may even be in a position to make better use of any information the FIS provides and maintains to support a wide range of families (for example, publications and Internet based directories of childcare, and families services and activities).

BENEFITS

As well as utilising the resources provided by a local authority FIS, and a range of other partners the Families First framework will help schools to demonstrate that they place families at the heart of their service provision. The benefits of these standards:

- A positive experience – FFQA fosters a supportive and enabling experience for all staff and stakeholders involved in undertaking the award.
- Quality improvement and consistency across school locations both in a local authority area and nationally.
- Evidence for Ofsted / Estyn inspections.
- National standards.
- As a quality assurance and improvement scheme the Families First Quality Award can be extremely helpful in supporting positive Ofsted outcomes. In 2015, the standards were reviewed in light of the Ofsted Common Inspection Framework³. The following numbers in this document relate to the following criteria assessors consider when making judgements:

1. Effectiveness of leadership and management
2. Quality of teaching, learning and assessment
3. Personal development, behaviour and welfare
4. Outcomes for children and other learners

³ Common inspection framework: education, skills and early years from September 2015. (Ofsted)

USING THE FFQA STANDARDS

As a School looks at the criteria explained on the following pages, they need to ask themselves, if an assessor is visiting our organisation for the first time:

- What would they need to see, hear or experience to demonstrate that the criteria are being met?
- How can we evidence the quality and impact of our practice and the services we provide?

Establishing the starting point is an essential first step in using the standards to drive continuous improvement.

Schools are set up in different ways and have different resources available to them. The school may sit outside the local authority or the same organisation may run a number of academies dispersed across different geographical locations. There may be particular key policies, plans or documents that the management or organisation may require the school to provide as evidence. When an organisation goes for assessment against these standards, Assessment Services will ensure that the assessor accommodates these differences and assesses a school accordingly.

EXCLUSIONS

When a school applies for assessment against the Families First standards ALL organisations must complete Standards 1-6.

1. schools providing grant funded early education for 2, 3 and 4 year olds must evidence Standard 7; and
2. schools operating in Wales must evidence Standard 8

GETTING STARTED

- ① To get the most value from the Families First Quality Award all members of staff should be involved in the process. This would include governors, leadership staff, classroom staff (teachers and teaching assistants), and other adults working within the school (midday supervisors, catering staff, volunteers and business support staff). (Criterion 1)

The school should consider how to involve its staff, pupils and parents with achieving the Families First Quality Award. This could include setting up small working parties involving a range of staff members to consider different standards, or a short online survey on a topic relevant to the standards to gauge pupils' and parents' views (for example, to find out what they think about the quality of information provided by the school).

- ② Review the standards and consider what evidence may already exist that demonstrates the standards are being met. Evidence may include: management information, including needs assessments; self-evaluation and assessment forms and reports; external reports on the quality, coverage and impact of local services on outcomes for parents / carers, prospective parents and families (for example, from inspections and assessments).

NEXT STEPS

- ③ Having considered current evidence and identified areas for development, plan how action on these will be taken forward. Establish priorities and agree objectives and targets with staff and partners. Decide what needs to be done, who will do it and by when.
- ④ Monitor the tasks to make sure they progress; identify any issues or risks at an early stage and make sure these are addressed as they arise.
- ⑤ Feed the outcomes and any feedback into the next review and planning cycle.

⁷Where the response rate for Parent View is low, Ofsted inspectors must take steps, during the inspection, to gather further evidence of the views of parents / carers. Inspectors should take account of results of any other surveys carried out by the school, or commissioned by the school, in addition to results from Parent View. Inspectors must not come to any final conclusions on the basis of the Parent View survey data alone. When Welsh schools are notified of inspection, they will receive information on how to conduct a survey of pupils and parents/carers. The surveys will form part of the pre-inspection evidence.
